Private guides and Tag-alongs

Private guides and special tours

Great Canadian reserves the right to put different guests together in one tour. If you wish to have your own group without other riders, you will be required to hire a private guide. The advantages of a private guide for your party alone are great. You can ride at your pace and choose terrain that fits your skills and interests the most. You are also able to ride different mountains than in our standard tours, which is a great advantage for returning guests.

The additional base charge for a private guide is $700 + 5% GST per day per group (max. 6 people per guide). On request we can accommodate groups of experienced riders for specific departures or riding areas. You must request these specifically and the charge for a private guide applies (this does not include the trail fee).

Expert rider tours or certain snow conditions may take guests into more aggressive riding terrain or avalanche prone terrain and will require guests to wear and use avalanche safety gear. These tours/departures are not suitable for inexperienced or novice riders.

Tag Along options

Riders with their own machine who want to tag along on an existing multi-day tour booking will be allowed only if riding levels are similar and the current group size does not exceed 5 (one guide) or 10 (2 guides) riders. Our guides will ask a person to leave a group if riding levels do not coincide with the group's abilities.

Tag-along fee is $250 per day (excl. gear/trail pass/lunch) plus tax. Advanced bookings are accepted; we do reserve the right to ask people to leave the group based on experience levels without refund.

Snowmobile Experience required

Snowmobiling in 4 feet of fresh powder is physically demanding and requires good strength, stamina and coordination. Consequently, mountain riding is predominantly done with one person per machine and no passengers are allowed. It is not the same as trail-riding, where one can stay seated; in mountain riding the rider frequently stands up and uses his/her weight to steer the machine. The nature of the riding and for liability reasons, a minimum age of 19 is required to ride your own snowmobile.

'A' level tours are suitable for novice riders with no or limited riding experience. However, previous riding experience and a good physical condition assist you in enjoying the mountain snowmobile experience the most. Please note it is in the interest of guests to select a tour that fits their ability level. Expert tours (C-level ability) require riders to have prior mountain riding experience, and riders of not sufficient ability may be asked to sit out a day or part of the tour, or hire a private guide, for the safety and well-being of other riders and guides. We reserve the right to combine tour groups or split any group. Multi-day tours are not suitable for passengers and/or children under the age of 19 (must have driver's license to ride their own).

Riding a snowmobile is easy

Your speed is controlled by a thumb activated throttle. Braking is done with one hand while steering takes place through a handlebar. Alpine snowmobiling also requires much steering by active riding position, and riders should be in good physical shape. Non-riding partners are welcome to join in activities like X- country skiing, snowshoeing, downhill skiing, dogsledding, scenic flights, shopping, hot tubbing.

Riders Registration, Liability & Insurance

We do our best to ensure the safety and enjoyment of all participants, but since snowmobiling involves known and unknown risks, we require all guests to sign a registration, assumption of risk statement and liability waiver prior to tour or rental departure. Waivers are available prior to making your reservation. We strongly advise participants to carry good medical insurance including recovery by helicopter.

Avalanches & Riding Safety

Please note that weather, snow, road and/or avalanche conditions may alter the riding programs and destinations. All our guides are certified in avalanche safety. All tour clients are required to carry avalanche safety gear which is included in their tour packages and on all rentals.
